35 Things Your Teen Will Never Tell You
Authority Sheds Light on the Mystery of America's Youth

(Nashville, TN) Whatever kind of parent you are, old, young, energetic, lethargic, depressed, what have you, parents of teens are all in this soup together. Welcome.

Learn how to dig deep, survive and perhaps even crack the psyche of your hormonal, temperamental, ever-changing teen with this light-hearted, mini-manifesto of practical, pragmatic parenting advice in 35 Things Your Teen Won't Tell You, So I Will.

"I hope the reader will come to regard this book as a tool in the parent arsenal for days when the parent feels he is on a steep cliff, the canteen fell into the ravine and there are no ropes other than the tether (which the parent may very well be at the end of)" said author Ellen Pober Rittberg.

Ellen Pober Rittberg is a writer, attorney, award-winning journalist and mother, who survived raising three teens—all born within a three-year time span. For more than a decade, she represented hundreds of young children and teenagers in family, supreme and surrogate court. She formerly hosted and produced "The Changing Family"—a live cable TV show and has contributed to the New York Daily News, The New York Times, The Boston Globe and several other large daily newspapers.
